

Mark Donig

Mark is a recent Public Policy graduate, with a concentration in Ethics and Public Policy. Mark was awarded the Ann C. Seminara Award for Outstanding Public Policy Senior, elected by his peers for making the “most important contribution to Stanford” from the Public Policy Class of 2009. Mark was a participant in the Bing Overseas Study Program in Berlin last Spring and Summer.

Mark had two essays published while at Stanford. The first was a commentary on Mark Twain’s “The War Prayer,” published in the Republic of Georgia, Japan, and the United States. A Stanford Daily Op-Ed was also re-published by the American Israel Public Affairs Committee.

Last year, Mark was Co-President of the Stanford Israel Alliance. This year he was the student delegate between the Stanford Israel Alliance and Coalition for Justice in the Middle East. He helped to forge closer ties among the two groups and create a Middle East Dialogue Group for student leaders.

Mark has been a teacher at a local Hebrew School; Co-Founder of Cal Sucks Shirts; participant in Alternative Spring Break Guatemala and New Orleans; Radio Talk Show Host for KZSU 90.1 FM; and a Stanford Daily Columnist.

Mark plans to continue his studies at the Interdisciplinary Center in Herzliya, Israel, pursuing a Master of Arts in Diplomacy. In August 2010, Mark plans to bring together 20 future leaders from Germany, Israel, and the U.S. and embark on a twenty-day historical and cultural tour of Berlin and Israel.
